Excerpt: . . . work of the army is to advance with the spear when the shield has done its work. In conclusion I would ask you to reperuse the last paragraph of this excellent paper; they are words which cannot be too strongly impressed upon us at the present time. I entirely endorse the opening remarks of the Chairman in introducing Sir John Colomb. The influence of sea power upon history is now an accepted principle, but that principle, I would remind you, was brought forward by Sir John Colomb as far back as 1873. Speaking for myself, I may say that when I was Commander-in-Chief on the China Station some years ago I based my plans for the defence of our commerce on that station on those lectures of Sir John Colombs at the United Service Institution, and on the works of his brother Philip, and although Captain Mahan hag gained such credit for his. book which is so wonderfully well put together, I would point out that he derived the foundation for that work from the Colombs. Hon. J. R. Dickson, C. M. G. (Federal Delegate from Queensland): It is no empty form of words when I say that I am sure we are all deeply indebted to Sir John Colomb for his admirable paper, which is of profound interest not only to this large attendance, but to all who take an interest in the expansion and development of the Empire, and will, I am...
