We trust you will presently see the advantage of accepting this offer; but, if you should still think it better to refer the whole to an arbitration, you will find us equally disposed to that mode of settlement, and the bill for 2001. , which Mr. Coutts will keep till we receive your answer, must in that case be returned. MR. J. C. WALKER TO MR. PINKERTON. Dublin, April 28th, 1803. I was favored last night with your obliging letter, for which I beg your acceptance of my best thanks. Availing myself of your goodness, I have drawn up some notices for the gentleman who is doing me the honor to translate my Irish Bards. I do not find that such a translation was ever published; nor are there any traces in Mr. Pinkertons correspondence by whom it was projected. The alterations and emendations suggested by Mr. Walker at...
